

Marnie Connolly

Marnie Connolly is a Senior Lecturer at Monash University, School of Rural Health—Bairnsdale. In this role Marnie supervises the implementation of the Years 2–5 academic MBBS curriculum and clinical placements at the Bairnsdale campus. Her interests in longitudinal integrated clinical placements lead her to complete a Masters thesis on the impact of students undertaking longitudinal placements on their clinical supervisors. Marnie is also a registered nurse with an interest in developing educational opportunities for primary care nurses in rural and remote areas of East Gippsland—Victoria. Her commitment to providing ongoing education for primary care nurses has resulted in being awarded (twice) the June Allen Practice Enhancement grant to continue primary care nursing education.
