

Rene Forsyth

Rene Forsyth is a PhD candidate from Curtin University in WA, with a primary goal of highlighting any disparities in rural and remote patient outcomes following an acute myocardial infarction, compared to metropolitan counterparts. Rene has a background in Radiography (Bachelor of Science) and continues to work part-time in this field. She was awarded the APA Scholarship in 2012 to commence this study. Having grown up in rural areas, Rene has a passion for rural health which has sparked her interest in research benefiting such communities.
