

Teresa O'Connor

Dr Teresa O'Connor provides academic and pastoral support to the MBBS students at James Cook University. She has a strong health background, working in clinical nursing and health management for many years and latterly in nursing and medical education. She lived and working in rural areas of Queensland and South Australia for over 25 years. Her interests are in providing appropriate support for students, particularly those who are challenged academically or personally by their chosen courses. She has a strong commitment to ensuring quality graduates who are able to maintain patient safety and professional standards. She has postgraduate qualifications in Education, Counselling and Public Health.