

Janet Richards

Janet Richards is a research assistant with the Flinders University Rural Clinical School in Renmark, South Australia where she contributes to research in the field of medical education and rural community health. She has authored and co-authored peer reviewed articles and presented at conferences in Australia and New Zealand. Janet has a Bachelor of Applied Science in Medical Laboratory Science from the South Australian Institute of Technology and worked as a medical scientist before changing her career direction and joining the rural clinical school in 2009. She has recently completed an Honors Degree in Health Science which explored the role modelling of resilience to medical students. Her research interests include determinants of rural and remote health and assisting rural communities to improve their health services.