Wendy Cabot

Wendy Cabot is the regional manager for The Benevolent Society in northern NSW. In this role she is responsible for a range of program areas, including mental health and child and family programs across the New England region, and has a passion for integrated service delivery and the benefits to consumers.

Prior to commencing with The Benevolent Society, Wendy worked as a registered nurse for over 30 years in both acute and community settings, and as a child and family health manager responsible for various programs, including child and adolescent mental health and Aboriginal health to name just a few.

Wendy is a member of numerous professional organisations including the Mental Health Coordinating Council, the peak body for non-government organisations.
