Karen Francis

Professor Karen Francis is the head of the School of Nursing, Midwifery and Indigenous Health, Charles Sturt University. She is recognised nationally and internationally for her contribution to the development of the discipline of rural nursing. Her research and publication agendas have focused on exploring the realities of nursing in rural environments, health workforce, preparation for practice, emergent contexts of practice, and rural population health issues. Karen contributes to the development of nursing, in particular rural nursing, through her role as Chair of the Australian College of Nursing Rural Nurses and Midwives.
