Kerry Taylor

Kerry Taylor is a Senior Research Fellow and Head of Health Education Research with the Poche Centre for Aboriginal Health in Alice Springs. She has previously worked in remote health education and undergraduate nursing education. Kerry has extensive experience working in Central Australian remote communities with a range of organisations, including Batchelor Institute of Indigenous Tertiary Education and NT Department of Health. Kerry’s PhD thesis was a study of intercultural communications in health care in Indigenous language settings. Her main teaching and research interests include cultural safety, Indigenous health, health literacy and health workforce preparation.