

Lynore Geia

Dr Lynore Geia is a Bwgcolman (Palm Island) woman and a senior lecturer in the College of Healthcare Sciences at James Cook University. Lynore is passionate about her community; her PhD research takes a strengths-based approach to exploring the intergenerational strengths of child rearing practices of Palm Island families. Lynore's vision is to see community development arising from the community informing government/non-government organisations out of genuine partnerships and social investment into people, more than programs.
