Improving healthcare in rural and remote regions

As Australia's leader in rural and remote health and medicine, James Cook University (JCU) offers courses and supports research for professionals involved in rural health.

Studying or engaging in research at JCU will equip you with the skills you need to address critical challenges facing contemporary health professionals. A defining feature of JCU is its tropical location and its many options for rural and remote work placement experience.

Our graduates fill rural health roles around the globe, with many opting to work in remote Australia or low and middle income settings in tropical regions.

With more than 100 postgraduate and undergraduate offerings, underpinned by leading research from the Australian Institute of Tropical Health and Medicine, JCU can help you take your career to the next level.
